

Make Your Part of the Show Bigger

We built a whole production system for campfire this year — music, lights, video, games, the works. Most of it's been running quietly behind the scenes. This is the menu of what it can do for your part, if you want it.

Nothing here is required. If you'd rather just do your bit the way you always have, that's great too. But if you've ever thought "it'd be cool if the lights did something here" or "the kids would lose it if we had a buzzer for this" — this is what's actually possible, and it's easier to set up than you'd think.

1 Your Entrance

Every Circle and Council role already gets a walk-up — a song, a light change, maybe a video — the second you're introduced. If yours is just "the mic turns on," we can do more.

Pick your own walk-up song. Anything — if we don't have it, we can grab it before the campout.

A short video plays behind you as you're introduced — a title card, a clip, a photo — before your walk-up music kicks in.

The lights change color the moment you're called up, and stay that way while you're on.

2 Sound Effects, On Cue

There's a whole soundboard already built — air horn, sad trombone, drumroll, applause, whatever fits. If your bit has a punchline, a reveal, or a "wait for it" moment, there's probably already a sound for it, and if there isn't, we can add one.

A drumroll before a reveal — the kind of pause a live sound effect makes land ten times better than silence.

A buzzer for a wrong answer, an air horn for a right one — great for anything with a "gotcha" moment.

A signature sound just for you — something that plays every time you show up, so the kids start to expect it.

3 Lighting & Mood

The poles flanking the fire can hold on a color, pulse, chase, or snap to full white — on cue, exactly when you want it, not just whatever's already lit.

A slow color fade under a story or a quiet moment — nothing flashy, just enough to set the mood.

A hard cut to red or a strobe for the dramatic beat in a skit.

Everything snaps to bright white the instant a challenge or game ends, so the whole circle can actually see.

4 Games & Challenges

If your part of the show is (or could be) a game, there's already a built-in one that fits most ideas — with its own intro, its own screen, and someone else running the buttons so you can focus on hosting.

Trivia — your own question set, your own theme, team scores up on the screen the whole time.

A timed race or a hold-it-as-long-as-you-can challenge — a stopwatch on the screen, times recorded and ranked automatically.

Musical Chairs, a Prize Wheel, or Shell Game — already built, just needs your own prizes/theme dropped in.

Head-to-head team scoring — Circle vs. Circle, points on the board, a big winner reveal at the end.

5 The Big Screen

There's a projector running the whole time. It's usually showing the current walk-up or game — but it can show whatever your bit needs.

A photo or short video behind you while you talk — a slideshow, a meme, a throwback picture.

A visible countdown if your bit is timed — the whole circle can watch the clock with you.

A quick announcement slide — next event, a schedule change, a shoutout — up in seconds, no laptop needed on your end.

A FEW IDEAS, STITCHED TOGETHER

These are made up — nobody's actually running these — but they're the kind of thing that's realistic to ask for. Mix and match, or come up with your own.

FIRESTARTER

The Big Entrance

Walk-up video of a torch catching flame, then a dramatic sting the instant it does. Lights snap to a warm amber the moment you step up, and stay there for the rest of your bit.

CANDY MAN

The Guessing Game

A quick trivia round themed around candy or the season's theme, team scores up on the screen the whole time, a cheer sound effect for every correct answer.

SAFETY OFFICER

The Fastest Knot

A timed challenge — first parent/kid pair to tie a bowline correctly. Stopwatch visible on the big screen, times ranked live, buzzer if someone jumps the gun.

STORYTELLER

The Quiet Build

Lights slowly dim to a low blue glow as the story opens, a single spotlight-style scene on you for the big moment, then a hard cut to full white the second it's over.

Bring Me the Idea

You don't need to know how any of this works — that's not your job. Just bring the idea, even a rough one, and we'll figure out the rest together.

- 1 Tell me what you're picturing — even "something like the Firestarter thing but for my bit" is plenty to start from.
- 2 If it needs a song, a photo, or a video, send it over (or tell me what to find) before the campout.
- 3 We'll do a quick run-through together beforehand so there are no surprises live.

This isn't the full list — if you've got an idea that's not on here, ask anyway. Most of this system started as exactly that kind of request.
